Learning Opportunity

Day 1 - Better Learning Starts With Better Communication

Our schools are only as good as the conversations that take place in them. This workshop introduces communication beliefs and habits that will help anyone communicate more effectively, both professionally and personally.

Day 2 - Enhance Communication Skills Through Reflective Practice

Identify and explore personal communication beliefs and habits. Gain new communication habits that will have an immediate, positive impact on your ability to communicate at work and at home

Day 3 - The Future of Coaching in a World of Artificial Intelligence

Coaching thrives on relationships, reflection, and meaningful dialogue. Instructional coaches support teachers in refining their practice and improving student learning. Traditionally, this work has been built on in-person conversations and observations. But with AI becoming more advanced, it's starting to shape coaching in new ways. When used well, AI can enhance—not replace—the human side of coaching, offering powerful insights and tools that help coaches and teachers work smarter and more effectively.

Discover how your communication beliefs transfer into habits that lead to an authentic life.

Presenters

Dr. Jessica Wise

Jessica began her educational career in Gwinnett County, Georgia, as an elementary school teacher. After seven years of teaching fourth grade, she transitioned into the role of an intervention teacher and instructional coach, where she found her true passion in education. Becoming a school-based instructional coach opened new possibilities for how to support education. After serving her school for two years as a coach, she joined the Curriculum & Instruction department where she served as a Literacy Instructional Specialist, and then a Leadership & Staff Development Instructional Coach. Jessica's true passion exists in the learning spaces where adults can explore instructional coaching and facilitation that prioritizes people and energizes educators.

Jessica received her doctoral degree in School Improvement from the University of West Georgia where her focus was facilitation of adult learning. When not working, Jessica enjoys hiking, movie night with her family, and working on DIY projects around the house.
