Learning Opportunity

This webinar aims to assist educators in improving their awareness of how to target different areas of speech and language using practical strategies for a wide range of learners through a universal lens. By providing specific strategies, resources and examples educators should leave feeling more confident in their ability to address speech and language needs of students in their classroom.

Presenters

Jillian Ankutowicz

Jillian joined SWCSS in January 2026 after living and working in Knoxville, Tennessee since 2021. She graduated from the University of Alberta in 2016, beginning her career in Southern Alberta, moving to Edmonton where she worked for a Head Start Program, and then providing outpatient services to children in infancy through to their teenage years. Jillian believes that collaboration and connection are the keys to promoting meaningful communication, and that all forms of communication are valid. Through ongoing learning and with a play-based focus, Jillian is committed to working within multi-disciplinary teams to provide child and family-focused services and forming positive relationships in order to support students' individual communication needs. Jillian enjoys spending time outside of work with her husband, travelling near and far, and being active. She is passionate about rugby – coaching, playing, or watching, and enjoys sharing her love of the sport.

Kaitee Isbill

Kaitee joined the SWCSS team after working in both rural and urban school settings across Southern Alberta and Montana. She is passionate about supporting students and families from diverse backgrounds, providing compassionate, individualized care and meeting families where they are at—no matter their situation. Kaitee's professional interests include augmentative and alternative communication (AAC), early language development, functional communication approaches, and play-based learning. She has experience working with multicultural and multilingual students and families and values collaboration as a key part of meaningful assessment and intervention. Kaitee believes that strong relationships and authentic connections are the foundation of effective communication support. Outside of work, Kaitee enjoys spending time outdoors with her family, golfing, fishing, and crocheting.
